Whether you are a teaching assistant, a mentor for students in research settings, or plan to become a faculty member, you will need to become familiar with practices that encourage academic honesty.

Some campuses have an honor code, while others, like UC Davis, have a code of conduct and an adjudication process for students referred for suspected cases of misbehavior.

In this 90-minute workshop you will learn more about the student conduct process and discuss practical strategies to encourage academic honesty in the classroom and research settings.

Lunch will be served to those who register.

Workshop Instructor: Colette D. Nuño, Assistant Director, Office of Student Support and Judicial Affairs
