As an international teaching assistant, do you experience anxiety when you teach for the first time in an unfamiliar university system? Do you want to hear what domestic teaching assistants feel when they teach for the first time? Do you have issues with how to present yourself in the classroom? Do you want to learn about the resources on campus that can help you overcome the anxiety and succeed in teaching?

Come to a roundtable discussion with fellow first-year teaching assistants, both international and domestic TAs, and TA consultants from Center for Educational Effectiveness. TA consultants have hands-on experience and knowledge to answer your questions and concerns. Please bring your own questions to the discussion. Topics covered could include:

- Common concerns of being an international teaching assistant (ITA)
- Types of cultural misunderstanding
- Potential solutions from Center for Educational Effectiveness (CEE)

Workshop Organizer: Zhen Zhang, PhD Candidate, Comparative Literature and Professors for the Future fellow (jnzhang@ucdavis.edu)